LIST OF ACCREDITED BUILDING SURVEYORS

INFORMATION: Accreditation is not valid if a practitioner is not covered by the required insurance. Builders are required to have Public Liability and Contracts Work insurance covering each project. Engineers, Building Surveyors, Designers and Construction Managers must maintain Profession Indemnity Insurance cover.

Consumers should ensure that the building practitioners they engage are covered by the required insurance. Full details of insurances required by accredited practitioners or Accredited practitioners details may be found at Department of Justice:

INFORMATION: EXPIRY OF BUILDING PERMIT FROM NOVEMBER 2012: Permits granted after 28/11/2012 will expire. It is in the interest of the owners to discuss the life of the building permit and proposed completion periods with the Building Surveyor and the complication of incomplete works.

It is in the best interest of the owners/applicant to complete the building work by obtaining a Certificate of Completion within the specified period. The specified period is 2 years. If the work is incomplete the owner or applicant has to make an application to the Permit Authority for an extension before a permit expires. The Building Surveyor is required to provide a report to the Permit Authority on the status of the work including inspections undertaken and support the extension of an additional period.

If the building work is not started within 12 months from the date of the building permit being issued the permit will lapse.
